Best & Co.

WE have often urged you to compare and examine.

You should compare and examine -certainly; but even more should you reserve a good margin in your mind for the reputation of the house whose merchandise and etatements you are comparing.

Take boys' clothing here at Best's as a good example of what we mean. No other kind of clothes for any age demands ability to withstand hard wear-and continue looking wellso much as boys' clothing. As, of Best & Co. years ago learned how to combine this quality of wear and certainty of continued good appearance. Which may be one good reason why Best's enjoys the reputation as the one right place to buy boys' clothes—as well as everything else for the boy.
